Of 183 farmers classified kulaks as of last November, 138 have been found not ~~TO HAVE BEEN~~ kulaks and the investigation is still not complete, the radio said.

A committee composed of the local party secretary, the council president, three production cooperative presidents and three individual peasants was formed following the congress to make the examination of the lists.

The results of the investigation have caused much joy in the entire community, the radio said.

But "who has put so many innocent members of the community on the kulak list?"

"I really do not know," answered the president of the town's executive committee. He said that he is the 10th chief of the local administration since the liberation, 11 years ago.

This, the radio said, is the "root of many faults which have been committed, or at least one of the roots."

The radio said that in 41 communities of DEVECSER district, 107 executive committee presidents, six deputy presidents and nine executive secretaries have been changed since 1950.
